Moses Alvarez

Moses Alvarez is the Director of Training for the Colorado Contractors Association and has been a part of the CCA staff since 2017. He serves as the administrator for several of CCA's workforce development programs, conducts and oversees safety training courses offered by CCA, and is also the staff liaison for CCA's Risk Management Committee (RMC). He works with the RMC and their OSHA Alliance representatives to promote best practices for excavation safety, work zone safety and many other workplace safety priorities for the infrastructure construction industry.

Moses' background as a skilled craftworker completing excavation work for commercial, residential, and utility construction projects has provided him with a unique perspective for safety in and around excavations. He hopes to utilize his experience in a meaningful way to prioritize safety for everyone that may be impacted when utility work operations are being completed in Colorado.
